THE RABBIT'S FOOT FROM HELL!

CURSED? This deadly charm is baffling the scientists who are trying to unravel its mysteries.

18 people die after holding the 'Charm of Doom'

By KEVIN CREED
Weekly World News

SAN FRANCISCO — Experts are baffled by a rabbit's foot that may have caused the deaths of 18 people!

Each of the victims died within days of acquiring the good luck piece. All the deaths occurred within a two-year period and were otherwise unrelated.

"The one common denominator is the rabbit's foot," said private investigator Dom Caluccio. "They all had it when they died.

"Modes of death ranged from violent and agonizing to serene and painless. One victim was torn to pieces by a pack of dogs. Another passed away in her sleep."

Caluccio was hired by the parents of a 22-year-old man who died suddenly of a heart attack two days after being given the charm. The family hopes Caluccio's investigation will help them understand their son's untimely death. Caluccio has traced the history of the rabbit's foot back to 1994 when Chinese immigrant Ling Hop Chan brought it over to America.

PRIVATE INVESTIGATOR Dom Caluccio.

Two days after his boat arrived in this country, Ling died of food poisoning at a Chinatown restaurant and the city claimed his belongings. Later the charm was purchased at a probate auction by an overweight housewife. She died the day after she bought the charm when she was crushed by a falling refrigerator.

Caluccio believes the curse is activated when the charm changes hands.

"Each of the victims believed they were carrying something that would protect them," says Caluccio, 33.

Here are just a few of the mysterious tragedies surrounding what Caluccio and others call "The Good Luck Charm of Doom":

- A 19-year-old college football player killed himself after playing the greatest game of his life. He was wearing the charm.
- A crossing guard holding the rabbit's foot was struck by a car and killed as he dashed into a crosswalk to retrieve a little girl's doll.
- A 48-year-old man died of mumps one day after buying three of his beloved collies. The charm was found in his pocket.

Caluccio has loaned the rabbit's foot to a respected northern California college science department where tests are being run.

RENOWNED Dr. Adolf Yepersoven is working his magic from beyond the grave.

THIS INCREDIBLE STORY FIRST APPEARED IN 'THE NEW YORK TIMES'!

Doctor who died in 1916 still curing thousands of sick & dying

MIRACLE WORKER Rubens Farias — possessed by the soul of long-dead Dr. Adolf Yepersoven — examines a patient as hundreds more wait their turn.

By JOE BERGER / Weekly World News

BOM SUCCESSO, Brazil — Thousands of sick, crippled and dying patients are flocking to this seedy Rio de Janeiro suburb to have their devastating ailments miraculously cured — by a doctor who died nearly 80 years ago!

Former electrical engineer Rubens Farias performs the treatments — everything from heart massage to spinal surgery — but he insists his hands are guided by the spirit of famed German physician Adolf Yepersoven, who left this world in 1916.

To his legion of grateful patients, Farias is Dr. Yepersoven, working his magic from beyond the grave. And they swear he has cured them of countless catastrophic illnesses that earthly doctors had declared incurable.

"When I went to see Dr. Yepersoven I couldn't walk at all, I had to be wheeled there in a chair," recalled jubilant schoolteacher Teresa de Fereira, 36. "The doctors said I'd never walk again, all but Dr. Yepersoven.

"The doctor cut my back open and adjusted my vertebrae with a simple pair of scissors.

"He used no anesthetic, but it didn't hurt at all, just like a gentle pressure on my back.

"Then he sewed me up and car accident seven years ago.

"I walked away sobbing with joy. Dr. Yepersoven may be dead, but he's still performing miracles."

The flamboyant Farias, who toils 12 hours a day treating rich and poor alike, has no medical training whatsoever. And he insists he'd never given a moment's thought to becoming a doctor until the legendary Dr. Yepersoven came to him in a dream a decade ago.

"He told me who he was and said that from then on, he and I would be one and the same — that his soul would possess my body, take control of my heart and hands, so I could finish up his business here on Earth," recalled the charismatic Farias, 41.

"I'd never heard of the man, but I've since learned he was considered a true genius in his time."

And since that fateful day, the tireless father of four has carried on Dr. Yepersoven's work, treating as many as 800 patients a day in a beat-up old building that doubles as a bar on weekends.

"Any day you go by that place, there are people lined up for blocks to see Dr. Yepersoven — because they know he can make them well when nobody else can," said awed former ambassador to Uruguay Oswaldo Camara.

"I had stomach cancer five years ago and the doctors told my wife, I would die within created in his office, I was cured — and now I've never felt better in my life.

"The man may have been dead for 80 years, but he's still curing the sick — and I'm living proof of that."

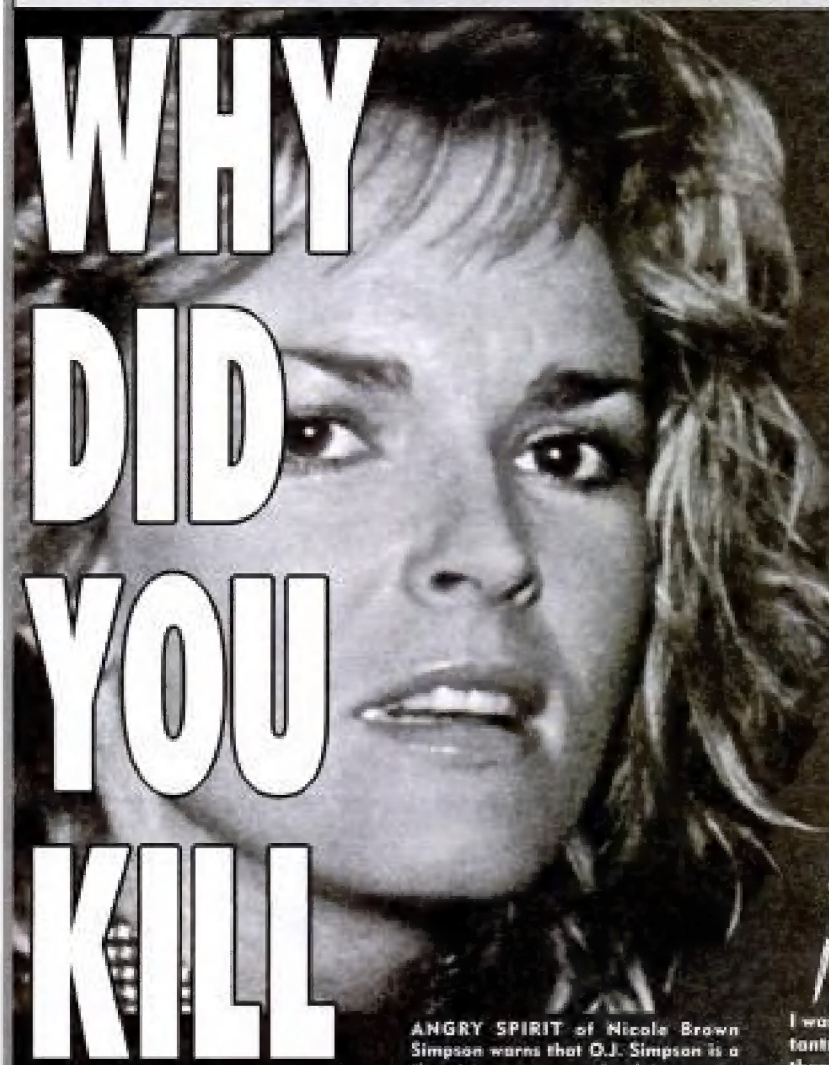
Nicole lashes out from the beyond the grave . . .

WHY DID YOU KILL ME, O.J.?



ANGRY SPIRIT of Nicole Brown Simpson warns that O.J. Simpson is a threat to any woman he dates.

By TERRY HAUSER / Weekly World News

"Why did you kill me, O.J.? You know what you did — and I hope the guilt kills you!"

Those are the shocking words of Nicole Brown Simpson — who has spoken from beyond the grave to world-famous medium Maria Kingston of Los Angeles. And Nicole has plenty more to say.

"Her spirit is one of the most active ones I have ever encountered," said Madam Kingston. "I spoke with her numerous times during the trial and have contacted her nearly every day since it ended."

Miss Kingston revealed Nicole is furious that O.J. is free — but she was not surprised by the verdict.

"Nicole often recalls that when she was alive she said many times O.J. could do anything he wanted and never have to pay for it. She says the murders and trial just proved she was right."

Madam Kingston made headlines during the Simpson trial when she announced she'd contacted Nicole's spirit. Madam Kingston asked to testify on Nicole's behalf but her request was denied.

Since then she has transcribed more than 160 pages of Nicole's quotes. Though most of them deal directly with her outrage against O.J., there are many other revealing and stunning remarks:

"O.J. was always fascinated with death and he told me he wondered what it would be like to kill another person," Nicole said during the final days of the trial. "He'd scare me when he spoke that way. I always feared he would carry out his desire someday."

In October, Nicole told Madam Kingston, "When I saw O.J. at the dance recital on the day he killed me, I noticed he was acting very odd. I was afraid he was going to throw a tantrum and cause a big scene right there in front of everybody."

SUPER-CELEB O.J. can get away with anything, Nicole's spirit says.

On several occasions Nicole has expressed sorrow for Ronald Goldman. "He was a such a nice young fellow. He didn't deserve to be caught up in the mess between me and O.J."

Many times Nicole has said she is fearful for other women O.J. dates. "If people think I'll be his last victim, they're crazy. It may be a while before he kills again but he'll never stop using his fists on women."

HOW TO TURN YOUR BEDROOM INTO A LOVE NEST!

By KATHY ROSS / Weekly World News

You can put your mate in the mood for love by making your bedroom more romantic, declares an expert.

"The secret is to make the room pleasing to both partners," said interior designer Carol Tippett. "When you walk into the room, you'll both feel relaxed and in the mood for romance."

Here's what she suggests:

♥Soften the lighting. Turn off glaring overhead lights and switch to indirect sources of light. For example, install a candle flicker light bulb in one lamp and a soft color bulb in another.

♥Get rid of the bedroom TV. It's noisy and distracting. Mute outside noise by playing music softly on a stereo or radio.

♥Scent the room with a special fragrance that's reserved for the bedroom alone. Spray dried or silk flowers with fragrance. Place small bowls of potpourri on nightstands.

♥Make your bed a cozy retreat. "Choose soft fabrics that are inviting to the touch," said Miss Tippett. "Sheets made of 100 percent cotton flannel are a good choice — they won't scratch tender skin. Add lots of fluffy pillows and an old-fashioned quilt to cuddle under."

♥Choose colors with a rosy hue. "For a warm and sexy atmosphere, decorate with coral, peach, soft mauve, plum, and rose. Bed linens, toss pillows and draperies will add to the romantic aura."

♥Accessorize with a fanciful touch. Select pictures and decorative objects for their appealing and romantic qualities. For example, old lacy doilies and tablecloths can create a pretty bedroom with a romantic Victorian air.

EAT LIKE A CAVEMAN — it's good for your health, say experts!

LONDON — Guzzling wine every day and eating like a caveman is the best way to live a long, healthy life, nutrition experts have determined.

Robust hunters back in the Stone Age ate plenty of fruit, vegetables, nuts and lean meat — a healthy diet we should adopt today, Professor Boyd Eaton said at a recent international nutrition conference here. In addition, Professor Serge Renaud recommended drinking up to five glasses of wine a day, as do many people in France. This helps reduce the risk of a heart attack.

Cross-country runner dies in quicksand — 15 miles from the finish line!

By RANDY JEFFRIES / Weekly World News

HOUMA, La. — A man's attempt to run through all 50 states ended tragically when his body was found in a quicksand pit just 15 miles from the intended finish line!

On August 1, 1995, distance runner Jim Harburg, 34, embarked on a cross-country trek, determined to run from his hometown of Houma through every state in the union — without ever setting foot on a public street or highway.

RUNNER Jim Harburg.

His rugged run took him through back-country trails, dirt paths, woods, swamps, deserts and mountains. It spanned more than 4,000 miles and was meant to end where it began — Harburg's front yard.

"Jim's goal was to prove to the world that a physically fit person doesn't need to use man-made byways to get around," said Harburg's second who assisted him by carrying the runner's supplies in a van. "He had run up to 30 miles a day for 185 days, only to die 15 miles from home.

"The only traveling he did that involved no running was in two airplane trips, one to get to Alaska, the other to Hawaii where he ran several miles through the wilderness of those states.

"Jim would report to me each evening at prearranged check points along the way. I'd give him his food and sleeping bag and we'd go over the next day's route.

"The night before he disappeared, he was so optimistic. He was about to start the last leg of the trip — a grueling 20 miles through a thick bayou. But he was very confident.

"When he didn't report in the next evening I called authorities and we retraced his planned route. There, in a huge patch of quicksand, we found his lucky cap floating on the surface."

Dredging the quicksand pit turned up Harburg's body.

Firing squad executes 13 murderers — at the same time

By RANDY JEFFRIES / Weekly World News

HONG KONG — More than 10,000 excited patrons packed into a sports arena and cheered wildly as a firing squad blew 13 murderers to Kingdom Come!

Tickets to the public execution went for $30 each and sold out within an hour of going on sale.

Fans were treated to the most gruesome violence imaginable as the condemned — nine men and four women — were hauled shaking and crying before the three-man execution team. Many vomited and begged for their lives as the crowd roared its approval. Each member of the firing squad shot the gang of convicted murderers and car thieves one at a time.

"They took their time about it," said Lo Song Ma, spokesman for the Wang So Sports stadium where the mass killing took place.

"They took turns, shooting each person several times. They deliberately left at least 30 seconds between each shot, leaving them wounded and in pain. I can't get the picture of that one woman out of my mind. They shot her twice without killing her. She was bleeding and begging them to finish her off but they left her alive for another full minute before blowing her brains out.

"I definitely believe thieves and killers should get the death penalty. But I don't approve of the way they did it. It looked to me as though they were playing to the crowd."

But not everyone agrees. Most people who attended the event said they enjoyed what they saw.

"That vermin got what they deserved," said one viewer. "It was great to see justice done."

The 13 had been convicted of 17 counts of murder. The women gang members used promises of sexual favors to lure male drivers off the highways onto side streets. The gang's men would be lurking there to kill them and steal their cars.

NEWSPAPERS around the world are reporting on the gruesome execution.

The wounded begged to be shot again and put out of their misery!

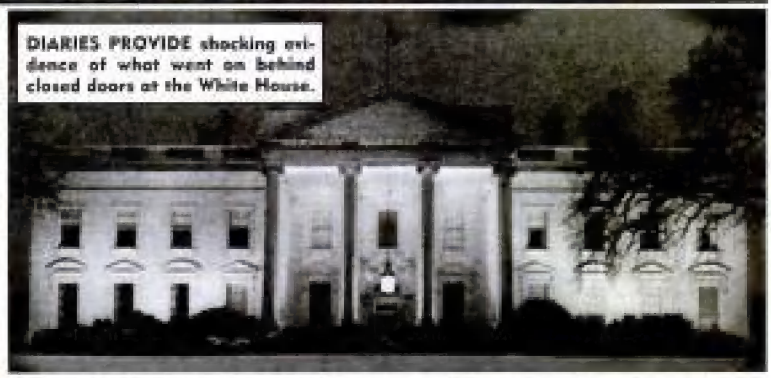
JFK'S



DIARIES PROVIDE shocking evidence of what went on behind closed doors at the White House.

BEATRICE DEXTER/ Weekly World News

BOSTON, Mass. — A professor here says he's stumbled on a priceless find that could dramatically change our perception of American history: The personal diaries of the late President John F. Kennedy!

FALLEN HERO: JFK kept journals — documenting everything.

The unidentified college lecturer says he found the four leather-bound journals in the basement of a home he bought last summer and has had them authenticated by handwriting experts familiar with the President's penmanship. Among their startling revelations:

- Kennedy had a chilling premonition that he would be assassinated just two weeks before he went to Dallas.
- The late President was deeply in love with the secretary of a Congressman and was planning to divorce Jackie so he could wed his sweetheart.
- Kennedy was undergoing treatment for sex addiction and was considered to be a hopeless case.

"These journals are the real thing and they are fascinating reading," said the professor, whose book on the diaries is scheduled for publication in June of 1996. "They give a whole new perspective on historical events."

In a recent telephone conversation with a Weekly World News reporter, the 56-year-old professor requested anonymity and refused to submit copies of actual portions of the diary for inspection.

But he did agree to read several of the journal entries so he can gauge public reaction prior to publishing them in their entirety later this year.

Here, word for word, are the entries from John Kennedy's diaries the historian shared with the NEWS:

- January 10, 1960: "In office at last — finally Dad's off my back. I'd feel proud, but he wants all the credit for my win because he fixed those Chicago ballots."
- August 29, 1960: "I don't agree with their aims, but these civil rights people are going to have their way no matter what position I take. Bobby doesn't want me to, but I'm going to throw my weight behind them, gain votes among liberals and blacks."
- October 15, 1960: "The Secret Service guys are help-

● February 3, 1961: "Had three 'visitors' again last night — no wonder my back goes out. Dr. S — — - says I have to get a grip on myself, but I need sex to unwind. He's going to try a new drug to help me get this under control."

● April 20, 1961: "The Bay of Pigs mess has me furious. Khrushchev on the red phone three times today. What a Keystone cops routine. Meg has been wonderful — the only one who can bring relief from worries and stress. Can't see enough of her.

● February 7, 1962: "John Glenn went up. Finally got the space program off the ground."

● July 18, 1962: "I told Meg I'd get a divorce after I'm no longer President. Living the lie with Jackie is hard, but I don't want to hurt her or the kids.

● September 12, 1963: "Lincoln's ghost kept me up all night again. He's worried about the Vietnam thing, but I keep assuring him that we'll settle the dispute in the next few months. His advice can be helpful, just like Truman said — but sometimes he's hard to take."

● November 15, 1963: "Had that dream and woke up in a sweat. Can't get it out of my mind that something terrible is going to happen to me in Dallas."

PREGNANT WOMAN GIVES BIRTH — TO $20Gs IN CASH!

BUCHAREST, Romania — Stunned customs officers watched wide-eyed as a woman arriving on a flight from China suddenly went into labor — and gave birth to $20,000 in cold cash!

Shocked cops say the packet of U.S. currency had been surgically implanted in harebrained Hui-ling Shih's uterus before the woman left Taiwan 18 hours earlier. The Romanian government tightly controls the amount of American money that can be brought into the country because it has much greater buying power than weak Romanian currency.

"The woman had planned to have a physician accomplice operate on her to remove the money once she had smuggled it past our customs officials," said Police Detective Stefan Desse.

"But as officers were examining her luggage, she began suffering contractions similar to actual labor pains and collapsed. Because she appeared to be pregnant, the officers rushed her into a room with a cot and summoned a doctor, assuming she was in labor."

But instead of giving birth to a homeang baby, anguished Hui-ling, 33, delivered more money than most Romanians make in a year.

The shaken lady, believed to be a "mule" — or courier — for one of the world's most daring smuggling rings, was reported in satisfactory condition at a Bucharest hospital. She will be tried on a smuggling charge once she is released.

"Doctors say the woman was able to pull off this stunt because she'd recently had a baby and her uterus remained large enough to hold the bills," Detective Desse said.

HOW TO SAY 'I LOVE YOU' — WITHOUT USING WORDS

You don't have to say "I love you" to show someone you really care — your actions can speak louder than words, says an expert.

By KATHY ROSS
Weekly World News

"Sometimes it's the nonverbal messages that are stronger and more meaningful," explained psychiatrist Dr. Danilo Ponce.

Here are his tips on how to express your love:

♥Use body language. "Simply holding hands when you're with your partner is a very powerful love message," said Dr. Ponce. "Unexpected hugs or a quick peck on the cheek are other nonverbal ways to communicate love."

♥Make eye contact. Gaze into your loved one's eyes with a flirtatious glance or special look. Your mate will get the message.

♥Slip a note into your partner's purse, briefcase or lunch box with a romantic come-on like, "I can't wait to see you tonight" or "I'm thinking of you." Another great idea is to leave IOUs like, "IOU one hug this evening" or "IOU a special dinner tonight."

♥Take note of the things your partner enjoys, such as a foot massage or a movie date. Each day, do one of them.

♥Give your mate a surprise gift. Don't wait for Valentine's Day or your anniversary. An unexpected present is a terrific way to say "I love you."

♥Serve your sweetheart a special meal. Set the table with your best dishes. Get some flowers, light candles and chill a bottle of wine or champagne. Put on your partner's favorite music — and relax.

♥Write a poem for your loved one. A poem can be reread over and over again. It's a treasure that says "I love you" for years.

♥Wear clothes your loved one likes. Spray on his favorite perfume or her favorite cologne. If your partner has given you jewelry, wear it — it shows you appreciate the gift.

Disguised bank prez holds up his own bank!

MADRID, Spain — Big-shot bank president Geraldo de Sonza was so strapped for cash that he picked up a pistol, slipped on a ski mask — and stuck up his own bank!

Cops say money-hungry Geraldo, 52, strolled into the bustling Banco de Espana in downtown Madrid, waved a gun at head teller Teresa Golon and got away with more than $12,400 in cash.

"I told the police the man reminded me of Mr. de Sonza, just the way he moved and talked and everything," said still-trembling Teresa, 33.

He was arrested at his home later in the day.

AFRICAN TRIBE CAME FROM MARS!

MARTIAN tribesmen have completely white eyes and are very fond of hoops.

By HOWARD DUNN / Weekly World News

Scientists claim to have found a jungle tribe that came from Mars 176 years ago — in 1820!

At least three of those original extraterrestrial colonists are said to be alive.

And according to reports, their spaceship is still hidden in undergrowth on the outskirts of their settlement northeast of Kinsangani, Zaire.

"This is the scientific find of the century," Dr. Signe Winslof told reporters in Boras, Sweden.

"The extraterrestrials have totally acclimated themselves to a primitive jungle existence in Africa. And yet they still possess the knowledge and technology to travel through space and colonize other planets."

The expert said he and half a dozen colleagues discovered the 50 Martian tribesmen on a routine study of Zairian cultures in late January.

The extraterrestrials were secretive and standoffish at first.

But they eventually began to trust the scientists and showed them the rusted remains of a silver, crescent-shaped starship, he said.

The tribe's historian reportedly said that 25 colonists fled Mars in 1820 to escape a virus that threatened to wipe out the entire Martian race.

"The Martian tribesmen are black and look just like humans with the exception of their eyes, which are completely white," said Dr. Winslof.

MAP shows site of Martian colony northeast of the city of Kisangani in Zaire.

"They show a fondness for hoops and circles. They use the shape as an adornment for their bodies and as designs for their houses.

"They speak a typical African dialect among themselves, but communicated with us in both Swedish and English.

"The aliens told us we were welcome in their settlement as long as we did not interfere in their internal affairs or primitive way of life."

Just why the extraterrestrials choose to live as savages in the jungle isn't clear.

But Dr. Winslof believes it might be "a kind of revolt against the highly technical, impersonal lives they and their ancestors led on Mars.

"They still have detailed maps of Mars and our solar system," he continued.

"But they made it clear to us that too much discussion of their past was off limits. Their background is something they can't or won't bring themselves to talk about in detail."

Dr. Winslof said he and his associates plan to return to the village no later than August and publish a full scientific report — with photographs — by December.

$1 million insurance policy forced on shoeshine stand!

DES MOINES, Iowa — Eric Hall shines politicians' shoes for $3 a pop. But the state says he has to take out a $1 million liability insurance policy!

But lawmakers are trying to help Hall and his brother-in-law get around getting the policy. "It's not like he's shining shoes so roughly that it knocks people off the stand," state House Speaker Ron Corbett, a Republican, and Senate Majority Leader Wally Horn, a Democrat, are drafting a letter to the agency, arguing that the stand operates "at the pleasure of the Legislature" and is exempt from requirements

$300, would put the stand out of business at the statehouse, where it's been for three years. The stand, owned by Hall's brother-in-law, makes about $400 over a four-month legislative session.

'Blood Kissing' is dangerous new teen fad, doctors warn

CHICAGO — America's teens are tempting fate with their latest terrifying fad: Blood kissing, in which youngsters draw blood when they smooch!

The dangerous practice has caught on in cities from California to Massachusetts and authorities worry that hundreds of thousands of kids are in danger of contracting AIDS and other blood-borne diseases from it.

"They bite down on each others' lips while kissing, causing small lacerations," said Dr. Maurice Forman, a psychologist who runs a mental health clinic for teens in the Chicago suburbs.

"There is an exchange of blood, and that's the point.

"The idea is if you love someone enough to blood kiss and risk endangering your life for him or her, that's really romantic."

PSYCHOLOGIST
Dr. Maurice Forman.

The trend is especially worrisome, Dr. Forman says, because potentially deadly diseases like AIDS, syphilis and hepatitis are easily spread from one person's open wound to another's.

And because the practice is growing in popularity, health workers are scrambling to publicize its dangers.

According to Dr. Forman, the kissing fad originated among gang members in the tough neighborhoods of Chicago, where peering fearlessness is a rite of passage.

Blood kissing was designed to demonstrate absolute trust and unquestioning love — and already has been responsible for at least a dozen deaths in this city.

"One 15-year-old girl caught AIDS from her boyfriend's gang leader after the guy asked her to give him a blood kiss," Dr. Forman says. "Later on, she gave a blood kiss to her boyfriend — and he got AIDS, too. That kind of infectivity is common among kids who engage in blood kissing. We're trying to spread the word that the dangerous practice demonstrates much more than love: It demonstrates a kind of suicidal stupidity."

We've better at deciding what we would do with a million dollars than what we're going to do without it.

SHORTEST CELEBRITY MARRIAGE ON RECORD LASTED 45 MINUTES!

When Rudolph Valentino married actress Joan Acker, the couple vowed their undying devotion — then split up just 45 minutes later!

There is one of the shortest celebrity marriages on record, but a number of well-known folks have failed to make it through their first month of wedded bliss.

Country singer Buck Owens and bubbly Jane Grief stuck it out just two days. Actor Dennis Hopper and singer Michelle Phillips split after eight days. Socialite Ludlow Smith and actress Katharine Hepburn were together for just three weeks.

"A lot of couples in Tinseltown will never be plagued by the seven-year itch," said one agent.

TOURIST'S SHOCKING STORY — IN HIS OWN WORDS!

'Corpse' buried alive digs himself out — from six feet under!

Tourist Jim Brobein was mistakenly pronounced dead and actually buried alive by peasants in Nauta, Peru. But the divorced 46-year-old Brooklyn engineer managed to save himself — by clawing his way up through six feet of dirt! Here is Brobein's own account of his horrifying ordeal:

By JIM BROBEIN

I awoke in the darkness and, yawning lazily, reached for the light switch . . . then froze as my hand slapped into hard wood. My fingers scuttled frantically along the box that surrounded me.

Then I began to scream — a high scream of raw terror. Because I realized I'd been BURIED ALIVE!

It was my worst nightmare come true. You see, I suffer from a rare neurological condition that can cause me to fall into a death-like coma that can fool even a doctor. It was diagnosed when I was 12, and since then I've had a dread of being buried alive — as well as severe claustrophobia. In fact, my shrink sent me on this trip to Peru to get me out of crowded New York City.

The last thing I recalled was drinking beer and playing darts at a local watering hole. I remember feeling faint . . . then, nothing.

After a moment I forced myself to stop screaming.

"Come on, Jim, you're just burning oxygen," I thought. "Panic won't help."

I hadn't been embalmed — maybe I'd also been put in a shallow grave. I rolled over and braced my back against the lid, then pushed with all there was about 36 cubic feet of air — about a half hour's worth.

My only chance was to break through the pine box and dig my way up.

Searching my jacket pockets, I found a rusty old can opener I'd been using at the bar. I began steadily hacking at the wood.

After about 15 minutes, I'd carved an 18-inch square. I gulped, then gave it a hard blow. The square fell down — and a huge slab of mud smacked my face. "It's rained," I thought hopefully. "That means the soil is soft." I began scrabbling eagerly at the mud, raking fistful after fistful of it past me into the box.

After 10 desperate minutes I had tunneled two feet up from the coffin. "Not fast enough — I'm not going to make it," I thought.

I began clawing the mud furiously, like a dog digging for a bone. My oxygen-starved brain was filling with odd visions — including the face of my beloved 4-year-old son. "Can't give up," I gasped.

My mind slowly ceased to function, but my hands continued to plow through the mud.

Just as I felt myself blacking out, my right index finger broke through to fresh air. I'd made it!

Moments later, I lay panting beside my own grave — staring at the star-filled South American sky and thanking God for my salvation.

Big Macs sent to the 'BIG HOUSE'

MY AMERICA By ED ANGER

Today's kids having fun the old-fashioned way . . .

COLLEGE PANTY RAIDS ARE BACK — GOD BLESS AMERICA!

MY AMERICA MY AMERICA MY AMERICA MY AMERICA MY AMERICA MY AMERICA

I'm madder than Hillary Clinton at a travel agents' convention over all the criticism our great college kids are taking these days.

You might find a hippie or two crawling out of the ivy on some campuses now and then but business classes are busting at the seams.

These fine youngsters are learning what this great nation is all about — the Almighty Dollar.

Even the late great General George Washington sold junk bonds to pay for guns to blast those tin-born Redcoats back to fancy-schmancy Buckingham Palace.

Let's face it. Most moms and dads struggle to send junior off to college for one reason — to learn to make money so they won't have to foot the bill for some pathetic 30-year-old bum.

And girls go to college to meet these sharp young men who know how to make a fast buck. The true spirit of going to college is back at last.

According to my latest statistics, panty raids on girls' dorms are up nearly 81 percent from 1984 and fast approaching the levels of the 1950s. Now that's something to give the old college cheer about!

Panty raids are as American as football and on some campuses, they've even created teams of fraternity men to compete in this fun sport. The team that grabs the most underwear on any particular raid gets a free keg of beer.

I'll take those delighted squeals coming from a girls' dorm over the sound of Commie protesters blubbering into bullhorns any day.

And another thing. Army ROTC is more popular than pep rallies on campus these days. What better way to teach the Future Young Business Men of America to protect all the things they'll be able to buy when they graduate?

The M-16 assault rifle they learn to use in ROTC is better than all the lawyers in town when it comes to guarding their money.

And instead of some stupid folk singer carrying a guitar around the quadrangle these days, the kids are carrying those newfangled portable computers.

Burn a flag on campus these days and you're liable to get a Radio Shack laptop up side the head.

ANGRY SHOPPER ASSAULTS PREGNANT WOMAN FOR SMOKING IN MALL

WEST DUNDEE, Ill. — A hot-headed shopper assaulted a pregnant woman at a mall — because he was annoyed by her cigarette smoke, charge stunned police.

Gerald Thompson, 38, was visiting the Spring Hill Mall when he spotted the expectant mom puffing.

"He didn't ask the woman to stop," said West Dundee Police Officer Steve Pirtle.

"He just walked up behind her and grabbed her hand. He twisted her arm behind the back of her head until she dropped the cigarette. Then he told her, 'There's no smoking in the mall.' "

The victim's horrified mom and a female friend informed Thompson that the woman was eight and a half months pregnant, revealed Officer Pirtle.

"He said to them, 'That's another reason why she shouldn't be smoking.' "

The man walked off, with the three outraged women following him, screaming for help. Alert mall security guards quickly cornered him and summoned police.

Officer Pirtle, who responded to the call, said Thompson claimed not to have been aware the woman was pregnant when he grabbed her. "He wasn't concerned about the effects smoking could have on her child — he was only concerned about his own comfort."

Thompson was charged with aggravated battery of a pregnant woman.

If convicted, he faces up to five years in prison.

SPACE-BASED SYSTEM DID NOT TARGET RUSSIANS

Reagan built 'Star Wars' shield as defense against UFO attacks!

By MIKE FOSTER / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan misled the U.S. public when he claimed the "Star Wars" defense system was being developed to protect us from a Russian nuclear attack, says a researcher.

In fact, the space-based system was created to shield America from alien invaders, according to Hugo Sprague, author of the upcoming book Dawn of Deception.

AUTHOR Hugo Sprague.

"The Star Wars system has already been used to destroy at least 14 UFOs before they even reached Earth's atmosphere," claims Sprague, a former military intelligence officer.

The Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as Star Wars, has been blasted by critics who charge the $30 billion-plus spent on the program in the 1980s was a giant waste of money.

And they are furious that lawmakers have recently proposed spending more on the program, now that the Cold War is over.

"What the public doesn't know is that the USSR was never the true target of SDI," says Sprague.

"The real enemy is, and always has been, extraterrestrial."

American officials have been aware of alien visits to Earth since at least 1947, according to Sprague, who says he has personally seen classified military documents that support his theory. "A crashed saucer was recovered at that time in Roswell, N.M.

"At first our government tried to work with the E.T.s — but in 1979, a group of human scientists were massacred by the aliens and officials realized that they were up to no good.

"When Ronald Reagan was elected in 1980, he proposed building an elaborate array of tracking satellites and powerful laser weapons in space to prevent any more UFOs from reaching Earth.

"At the time, Reagan told the public we were working on a huge nuclear 'umbrella' to protect us from a Russian sneak attack.

"By and large, gullible Americans bought that unlikely cover story."

The most recent UFO downing took place early in October, claims Sprague.

"A satellite detected an oblong craft nearing the moon.

"The message was relayed to a high-tech laser weapon mounted on an orbiting platform — and a beam blew the UFO to bits!"

Bride dumps groom for best man!

BOTTROP, Germany — Cabdriver Thomas Schmidt's marriage lasted just 12 hours — ending when his bride ran off with the best man!

Schmidt, 26, said his union with wife Aloisa, 28, got off to a bad start when he accused her of dancing too much with Rudy Horse, 31.

She responded by hurling her wedding ring to the floor and running out the door.

Within 12 hours she had a lawyer working up divorce papers so she could marry Horse, newspapers said.

MEET THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC in Person!

"HE revealed my lucky numbers. I won $116,788."

Even for a poor policeman's widow, a happy phase has now begun. When her husband died, he left not only debts but a spastic and crippled son. The desperate woman turned to the best doctors to help her son. But she was lacking the most important element: money.

In desperation, Mrs. H. wrote to the world-famous prophet HANUSSEN. The clairvoyant helped: "Fill out a lotto ticket! You will win a large sum of money."

The skeptical widow ("I never believed in fortune tellers") risked $20 and won $116,788! Now she can pay off her house and help her ailing son.

–Translated from an article appearing in "BILD", the largest German daily newspaper.

"HE FOUND MY LONG LOST DAUGHTER!"

When she was 15, my daughter Rikki ran away from home. After five years of searching I spoke to HANUSSEN. "Your daughter is in Rome. Contact the authorities there." He wrote me. Eight weeks later, after following HANUSSEN's advice, I received a letter from my daughter—in Rome—begging forgiveness for running away!"

APOLLO XIII

The collision of the SCHWARZWALDER BUSTY—"Black Forest Messenger"—carried the story of HANUSSEN's detailed predictions on Apollo XIII—that the danger would occur on the flight to the moon... that the mission would return to Earth ...that the three astronauts would land safely. Months later, everything happened precisely as he had described it!

This is what the press has named me. And the radio. And TV. But you see, statements such as these are meaningless to me. Of course, I already know what is going to happen tomorrow. Events that will happen sometime, somewhere, appear as a movie before my mind's eye.

This is the way I foresaw the Apollo catastrophe, the plane crash in Paris, the bloody drama of the Olympics in Munich, the fall of Nixon, the dramatic earthquake in San Francisco, the riots which rocked the world in Los Angeles, and the fall of the Berlin Wall. The list goes on and on. But all of this is insignificant to me because it does not enable me to help YOU. And this is what is most important to me. YOU. I WANT TO HELP YOU! This is the reason fate has bestowed upon me special capabilities... the 6th sense, if you will. I want to look inside the hearts of my friends who are suffering. I want to feel my way inside. Did my dentist molest me while I was knocked out?

Dear Serena: I recently had a very unusual experience at the dentist's office — or at least I think I did. I believe he molested me while I was knocked out by the gas.

I was having two teeth pulled and requested anesthesia because I always have a hard time at the dentist's. But when I woke up I felt like something funny had been going on. I felt violated and, I admit, a little bit frisky. But I'm still pretty angry about the whole deal, if it happened. I don't dare ask the dentist if he did anything because I'd be humiliated if I were wrong. So I'm turning to you — did my dentist molest me while I was knocked out? — Angry in Portland

Dear Angry: No, he didn't — but he did engage in some naughty talk with his nurse during the procedure. You heard this conversation and had some pretty wild dreams. That was the only thing that went on — even though I feel it is rude for a dentist to talk like that in front of a patient.

Dear Serena: My girlfriend has a twin sister and I have a weird feeling that they keep switching on me. These girls look just alike and they both are real pranksters, so it wouldn't surprise me one bit. My problem is, if they are switching, then there may be a possibility that I don't know which one I'm in love with. So I have two questions: Have they been switching on me — and if they have, which one do I truly love the most? — Confused in Richfield

Dear Confused: Your girlfriend and her sister have never switched places — but I know that in the back of your mind you have fantasized about it. Having a crush like you do on your girlfriend's sister is not healthy — and that's one reason why you'll never have a long-term commitment with either of these women.

★ ★ ★

Dear Serena: I share a house with six other girls. We all get along pretty well but lately one of the girls has been eating all my food — including two pieces of birthday cake I put in the refrigerator last week. They all swear they're not guilty but I know someone has to be doing it. Please tell me who it is. — Cheated in Wichita

Dear Cheated: Robin's boyfriend Will has a habit of gobbling food that doesn't belong to him. She doesn't know he's doing it, but they're about to break up anyway — you won't have to worry about him much longer.

My boyfriend's an angel — but he's uglier than sin!

ANNE in Key Largo.

Dear Dotti: My boyfriend is the kindest, most loving and sincere man I've ever met. He treats me like I'm a queen and I love him madly — but he's uglier than sin and I'm embarrassed to be seen with him in public. I'm confused, Dotti. Is it possible for someone to love a person but not be physically attracted to him? That's the way I feel but somehow it doesn't make any sense. What should I do about our relationship? — Anne in Key Largo

Dear Anne: Don't be a pinhead! If you really loved this man, you'd be attracted to him mentally AND physically. Since you aren't, you ought to do yourself and him a favor and get yourself a new man. Either that or put a bag over his head!

Bass snoozes while we carry the load!

Dear Dotti: My supervisor at work slept his way to the top — not in the sexual sense, but in the sense that he snoozes two to three hours a day right at his desk! I'm not kidding, Dotti. The guy started out as a regular worker like the rest of us and keeps getting promotions in spite of the fact that he spends half his time sleeping and the rest trying to get out of work. The big boss has his offices in another town and doesn't know what's going on. Help! — Furious in Milford

Dear Furious: Put the idiot's hand in a bowl of warm water every time he falls asleep at his desk. It may not cost him his job, but as any prankster knows, you'll get your revenge — because the trick will make him wet his pants!

My wife's a germ freak and I think she's nuts!

Dear Dotti: I'm starting to think something's wrong with my wife. Recently she started complaining about germs and dirt and she's washing her hands 30 times a day. She bought a box of surgical masks and wash their hands compulsively. My doctor is one of them!

I asked about sex — & got a mouth full of soap

Dear Dotti: A couple of weeks ago I heard some kids at school talking about sex. They wouldn't clue me in, and when I asked my mother to explain it, she washed my mouth out with soap. You're my last hope, Dotti. Please tell me what's going on. I'm 11 years old. — Curious in Boston

Dear Curious: An 11-year-old child is much too young to concern himself with sex. Write back when you're 21 and I'll be more than happy to fill you in.

Dear Macho Man in Metcalf: Men might be kings of their castles, but women rule the world — and don't you forget it!

Dear Dance Fiend in Scott City: Anybody who goes to a nightclub seven nights a week isn't just stupid, he's insane!

Dear Angry Kid in Conway Springs: I hear what you're saying, but remember this: There may be 101 ways to skin a cat — but smart people use a knife!

Dear Ugly in Maple City: At least you admit it!

Dear Curious in Minneapolis: Statistics show that 55 percent of people were taking lunch breaks when God gave out brains and you're one of them!

Dear Disappointed Guy in Morton: Now you know why everyone calls her "stretch!"

Dear Cowboy in Houston: I can't think of one good reason to brand your girlfriend.

Dear Benjamin: I'm no psychiatrist but your wife sounds perfectly normal to me. Lots of people wear surgical masks and wash their hands compulsively. My doctor is one of them!

Dear Dotti: I was having coffee kitchen totally naked! Being the lady that I am, I tried not to stare. But his mother had the gall to comment on how handsome the boy looked. I was floored, Dotti. I had no idea what to say. What would you have done? — Megan in Pasadena

Dear Megan: When creeps pull stunts like that, you've got to think fast. Since most men are EXTREMELY sensitive about their masculinity, I would have told the kid: "How disappointing. You look 'bigger' in clothes!" On my way out the door I would have told the mother: "Thanks for the coffee, acorn brain. Don't ever call me again!"

Fiance says he needs more than one woman!

Dear Dotti: About six months ago I got engaged to a man who is perfect in every way but one. He can't be loyal to one woman and has at least five other girlfriends that I know of. I've asked him to stop seeing other women but he says it's too hard to stay true to one gal. We'll be

Dear Julie: The way I see it, you can do one of two things: Stand in line to see your own husband — or find a man who has the guts to stay with one gal!

JULIE in Green Bay.

Women ain't good for nothin' but cookin'!

Dear Dotti: My brother says girls are only good for cooking and that really roasts my butt. I think men and women are equals. And I really want to know what you think. — Angry in New York

Dear Angry: Don't be stupid. Men and women can't be equals — women are the SUPERIOR sex!

IZARRE SUICIDE CAPTURED ON FILM

WOMAN JUMPS OFF 12-STORY BUILDING & LANDS ON BOY, 9

BOTH DIE INSTANTLY!

ANTWERP, Belgium — Depressed Marie Gillon not only leaped to her death from a 12-story building, she took the 9-year-old boy she landed on to Heaven with her!

Incredibly, an alert photographer in a building across the way captured the whole drama with her telephoto lens!

The mind-bending tragedy unfolded two days after the 28-year-old woman broke up with her boyfriend of 11 years.

In a suicide note that was found in her apartment, Miss Gillon said she "had no reason to live anymore. Death is the solution to my problems."

She leaped from the office building where she worked as a secretary in an insurance office at 5:30 p.m., landing on unlucky Claude Masumi as he walked home from school.

Both he and Miss Gillon died instantly, authorities said.

How to unlock your WINNING powers 4 easy steps — that's all it takes!

Everybody loves a winner — and you can release the winner in you by following a simple four-step plan, declares a psychologist. Here's what to do:

1 THINK LIKE A WINNER, NOT LIKE A LOSER — "Emotions are like muscles, the ones you use most grow the strongest," says noted expert Dr. Beryl West.

If you always look at the negative side of things, you'll become a downbeat, pessimistic person.

Even slightly negative thoughts have a much greater impact on you and last a lot longer than powerful positive thoughts.

Negative thinking doesn't do you any good, it just holds you back from accomplishing the things you want to do.

When a negative thought creeps into your mind, replace it by reminding yourself of your strengths and talents.

2 START LIVING TODAY — What's done is done. We've all gotten a raw deal at one time or another. Don't be so hung up on what happened to you in the past that you lose sight of your future. Get on with your life . . . starting now.

3 DON'T FEEL GUILTY — Fretting over past failures only wastes energy. Instead, focus on what you've accomplished, even if it was small victories.

"Allow yourself to be human," said Dr. West. "Be realistic in your expectations — most people put a greater expectation on themselves than they should."

4 TAKE CONTROL OF YOUR EMOTIONS — "When you're faced with a difficult situation, keep your emotions in check," said Dr. West. "You can't control every person and situation, but you can control how you feel about them."

For example, you may be forced to work closely with someone you don't like or be asked to do a job you dislike. If you let your feelings get in the way, it will only hurt you because the job won't get done properly.

Instead, find a positive trait in the other person or concentrate on a positive outcome to the difficult situation.

Think about any rewards you may get for finishing the work early or for doing an exceptional job. That way you will turn a negative emotion into a positive one that will help you to reach your final goal.

Wildlife officials are desperately trying to save a 6-foot earthworm that almost died while a camera crew was documenting its length for the Guinness Book of Records.

The big worm was caught by a bird and injured. He head survived, however, and veterinarians at Britain's Canterbury wildlife park think it might grow back.

Pot of frankincense found in ruins of ancient manger!

BETHLEHEM — There is "no particular reason to believe" that a 2,000-year-old pot of frankincense found in the ruins of an ancient manger was a gift the Wise Men brought to the baby Jesus, Israeli archaeologists report.

If you find something worth living for, something to live on will turn up.

LOOK OUT! Very few people have ever been hit by a meteorite — but Larry Van Reenen has been conked by two of them!

IOWA MAN HIT BY METEORITE ...for the SECOND time!

By WHITNEY ASQUE / Weekly World News

In a mind-blowing coincidence, an Iowa man has been hit by a meteorite — for the second time!

Larry Van Reenen first made national headlines when he was conked on the head by a meteorite back on May 19, 1975, at the age of 18. At the time, experts estimated the chances of being hit by a falling space rock were about one in 2 billion.

"Getting hit by the first meteorite back then made me a bit of a celebrity," the 41-year-old farmer said. "Even after all these years, strangers would recognize my name and ask me about it. And to tell the truth, when I got hit this time, I thought someone was pulling a prank on me.

"But I was all by myself out in a field when it happened and there was no one anywhere near enough to have thrown it at me," he said. "I knew it had happened again."

But Van Reenen considered keeping the second strike a secret.

"I was afraid no one would believe me," he said.

"But my wife said I should take the meteorite to a lab and have them determine whether it was actually from outer space. They said they believed it really was, so I do have a bruise on my back that matches the rock and I guarantee you I didn't do that to myself."

The latest incident occurred January 13 near Van Reenen's home outside Dubuque, Iowa.

"I felt something glance off my left shoulder blade," he said. "It wasn't a really direct hit but it was hard enough to kind of knock me off balance.

"After I saw the rock on the ground, I looked around to see if there was anybody nearby. When I realized I was all alone, I knew I had been hit by a meteorite again."

Experts say the odds against a person being struck by a meteorite twice are 1 in 1 quintillion — that's 1 followed by 18 zeroes.

Van Reenen said he has kept the original meteorite for 25 years and now he's going to add the new one to his bizarre collection.

"I've been offered some pretty big bucks for the first one but I'll never give it up," he said, adding that the new one is more valuable because it's smaller.

INCEST MURDER PLOT!

KISSIN' KIN SHOCKER!

Grandfather has affair with granddaughter — then they try to kill her new husband!

By MICHAEL FORSYTH/Weekly World News

TIPPAH COUNTY, Miss. — A man and his granddaughter who'd been involved in an incestuous affair for nearly two decades were sentenced to five years behind bars — for their bizarre plot to murder the woman's husband.

Shockingly, twisted grandpa William Douglas Hinson, 71, and devoted descendant Teresa Jean Hutcheson, 30, already had two kids together before she became married 3½ years ago.

DEVIANT grandpa William Hinson

"In my 20 years on the bench I thought I'd seen everything. But this is the most sordid case I've seen — where the great-grandfather is also the father of his great-grandchildren," outraged U.S. District Judge Neal Biggers Jr. blasted as he handed down the jail terms on November 29.

"If I could give you 20 years, I would."

Hinson and his granddaughter began their sick relationship when she was only 11, she admitted in court.

"Some of their relatives knew what was going on," said Tippah County Sheriff Paul Gowdy, who investigated the murder plot. "I have no earthly idea why nobody did anything about it."

Hubby Jimmy Dean Hutcheson thought the incest was all in the past when he married Teresa, says his stepmom, Marti and Teresa picked up their affair. They also began to hatch a plot to get rid of Jimmy Dean, they later confessed. "Their motive was money. The husband was insured for about $200,000," said the sheriff.

NEWLYWEDS: Jimmy Dean Hutcheson adored his wife Teresa Jean.

First the lovers tried to hire a male relative to bump off Jimmy Dean.

"The husband was supposed to get shot while deer hunting. They told the man to make it look like an accident," said the lawman. "But he thought they were joking, so the plan fell through."

Next, in May 1994, the bungling duo attempted to electrocute Jimmy Dean as he fixed wiring under the house. While he tinkered, they suddenly switched the power back on. "But the electricity didn't kill him — it just burned his hands," said the sheriff.

Finally the couple tried to hire the would-be hit man's twin, offering him a $25,000 cut of the insurance money. Instead he went straight to Sheriff Gowdy, who launched an investigation.

"We observed them meeting the man and taped them telling him what to do," said the sheriff.

After being confronted with the incriminating tapes, the pair pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit murder for hire.

Jimmy Dean was stunned to learn Teresa had plotted against him, said his stepmom. "He worshiped the ground she walked on."

NEW PROSTATE CANCER TREATMENT CAN CURE 9 IN 10!

A remarkable new prostate cancer treatment in which radioactive "seeds" are implanted in tumors not only will cure 90 percent of patients, it also has fewer side effects than other treatments — and doesn't require major surgery, experts say.

By KELLY FRANCES
Weekly World News

What's more, the treatment can be performed on an outpatient basis and requires only a local anesthetic.

"The patient can be back at work the next day," says cancer specialist Dr. Dattatreyudu Nori.

In the amazing new treatment, called "trans-perineal implantation," radioactive pellets are placed in needles and injected through the skin into the man's diseased prostate. The surgeon is able to pinpoint the tumors with the help of a CAT scan-type X ray and a computer. Once planted, the pellets blast the tumors with radiation, shrinking them until they're gone. Ninety percent of patients can be cured this way if the tumors are detected early.

Other treatments, like prostate surgery or bombarding the gland with a beam of external radiation every day for seven weeks, are as effective — but these traditional methods have terrible side effects.

With surgery, the whole prostate or a section of the male sex gland is removed, Dr. Nori said. Removal of the gland causes 100 percent of the patients to become impotent and 40 percent to become incontinent. If only a section is removed, these side effects are reduced slightly.

Hitting the area with a beam of radiation cuts the impotency rate to 50 percent and the incontinence rate to 15 percent. But implanting the radioactive seeds causes less than 10 percent to become impotent and hardly any incidence of incontinence.

Docs reattach elephant's trunk!

BOMBAY, India — An operation of mammoth proportions was carried out at a local zoo — where surgeons successfully reattached an elephant's severed trunk!

A 6-year-old elephant named Surupa lost a chunk of its trunk when it bolted while being led back to its enclosure by a keeper using a rope fastened to its trunk.

Zoo officials said the 3,000-pound elephant is in no danger of dying but, since elephants breathe through their trunks, they are keeping a close eye on Surupa's condition.

Aunt Ejnie says economists are telling housewives they can reduce food spending by careful buying. "What I want to know," she continues, "is where do you find the cheaper cuts of macaroni?"

Loyal dog travels 8 miles to fetch his master's slippers!

JACKSON, Miss. — A loyal dog showed he was the world's most faithful pet — when he traveled a mind-boggling eight miles to fetch his owner's slippers!

Pet-owner Terry Pearson got his bloodhound Augie in 1993 and trained it to retrieve his slippers the minute he got home from work — and the hound performed the deed every day for more than two years.

"When I got a new pair of slippers as a gift I decided to throw the old ones away," Pearson said.

PET-OWNER Terry Pearson.

"I put them in a trash can outside the house but Augie dug them out. I was impressed by that."

To get rid of the slippers once and for all, Pearson drove to a dump outside town and threw them out along with a load of boards and cement blocks the garbagemen wouldn't normally pick up. "Augie was in the truck when I threw the stuff out because we were going to the park," he said. "But what happened the next day was beyond belief."

By ANNE VALLE
Weekly World News

Shortly after Pearson came home from work the next day he noticed Augie had slipped out of the backyard.

"He gets out a lot and roams the neighborhood," Pearson said.

"But this time he was gone a lot longer than usual.

"After a few hours I went out looking for him," he said.

"That was when I saw him walking up the street — with my old slippers in his mouth."

Incredibly, Augie had made the four-mile trip to the dump, dug out the slippers and traveled four miles back to the house.

"He had to cross at least one highway and seven or eight main intersections to get to the dump," Pearson said.

Now Pearson said he's decided to keep the old slippers.

"They're kind of torn up but with all the hard work Augie put into getting them back, I can't see throwing them away now."

THERE'S no distance too far for the world's most faithful pet, Augie, to travel.

WARNING TO ALL MEN:

Tap water can turn you into a big drip in bed!

Drinking tap water can make you a lousy lover, say worried scientists.

Experts say that male sexual performance is steadily declining worldwide — because female hormones used in industrial products are polluting rivers — and finding their way into tap water. The average size of male genitalia is also shrinking, studies show. German researcher Klaus Lennarts cautions that every gulp of water increases the risk of impotence.

And the long-range effects of the hormone intake could be even more profound, he warns: "The world could become a female-oriented society."

Based on Birthdate, Money Back Guarantee ($1.00), 1042 N. Buckner, Dallas, TX 75218

Oldster who gave birth at 62 wants another baby — at 64!

ROME, Italy — The woman who made history by giving birth at the ripe old age of 62 has announced plans to break her own world record — by having another child when she's 64!

Baby-crazy Rosanna Della Corte became the oldest new mom ever when she delivered her test-tube tot Riccardo — the product of her husband's sperm and a donor's egg, artificially implanted in Rosanna's womb. But now the long-in-the-tooth supermom says she wants to have another baby next year, "so that when I and my husband die, Riccardo will not grow up alone."

YOUR BODY LANGUAGE REVEALS THE SECRET YOU!

The way we sit, stand, talk and gesture says plenty about us. Here are some of the secrets our body language reveals, according to Barnard Asbell, co-author of What They Know About You:

● The more comfortable you are with your marriage the less you and your mate look at each other as you talk. If you're a poorly adjusted couple, you glance often, each of telling you the truth, you could be wrong. A man who is lying to another man is likely to keep as steady eye contact as one who is telling the truth. When a man is lying to a woman, he is likely to gaze longer than when telling the truth.

● If your partner in conversation leans his or her head or body in imitation of yours, or holds his legs or arms or hands in a way that lis-while talking probably likes you more than one who leans backward.

● If you are conversing with someone you think shares your attitudes, you're likely to stand or sit closer than if you've been told the person has opposing attitudes.

● If you're a man, the farther you sit from the other person, the more willing you are to talk intimately about yourself.

YOU & THE LAW

EXPERT ADVICE ON DEALING WITH EVERYDAY PROBLEMS!

GLOBAL NEWS SERVICE

Does an engagement ring have to be returned when the romance goes sour? If a teenage girl becomes pregnant, can she force the baby's father to marry her?

These are just two of the common legal questions answered in a fascinating handbook, Understanding the Law, issued by the New York Bar Association. The answers apply in almost all states, according to John Williamson, co-author of the handbook.

Here are a few of the book's helpful questions and answers:

Q Bill gives Mary his grandmother's valuable diamond ring when they become engaged, but later calls off the wedding. Does she have to return his ring?

A If Bill can prove that the ring was given solely on the condition of marriage, a judge can order Mary to return it.

Q If a carpenter gives you a written estimate on a job, can he later stick you with a higher bill because of problems he encounters while doing the work?

A No. When you agree to have work done at a quoted price, any additional work that is carried out without your permission is unauthorized and you are not liable for the extra charges.

Q Harry marries Sally — then discovers she owes staggering debts. Is Harry required to pay off her bills?

A No. A spouse is only obligated to pay debts for necessary expenses incurred during the marriage — not before it.

Q If a teenage girl becomes pregnant, can she legally force the father to marry her?

A No, there's no law that compels one person to marry another — for any reason.

Q Joe dines out and finds a hair in his food. Does he have to pay for the meal anyway?

A No. A diner is entitled to expect that the meal he orders will be served properly — not burned, undercooked or contaminated with hair or other foreign material.

If the restaurant insists that Joe pay for the meal, he can take the issue to Small Claims Court.

WACKY FACTS:

In prehistoric times, rodents the size of bears inhabited much of the earth and several species of rats that large can still be found in Papua, New Guinea.

Scientists can't explain it, but a 23-foot-tall iron pillar in India has stood outdoors for 1,500 years — without ever rusting.

During the 18th century it was briefly a fad for wealthy Boston women to hide dwarf servants under their hoop skirts.

Black snow is a frequent occurrence around the world. The jet-black blizzards usually follow a volcanic eruption miles away.

MEET AMERICA'S WORST PSYCHIC!

By MARCIA TANNER / Weekly World News

LOS ANGELES — America's Worst Psychic is a charming old lady who regularly counsels celebrity clients that other clairvoyants would kill for. But Maria Cruzec has never predicted anything of substance — and almost always steers people into disaster!

CELEBRITY clients flock to psychic Maria Cruzec — in spite of her dead-wrong predictions.

Her predictions are always wrong — but wealthy clients love her!

The 71-year-old seer lives in an opulent Hollywood mansion financed with the cash top stars, business executives and politicians shell out for advice on everything from careers to their love lives.

But Miss Cruzec's only claim to fame, other than her uncanny ability to gain the trust of clients who should know better, is a long series of sensational predictions — all of which were wrong.

PREDICTION: The Edsel will sell like hot cakes!

In January of 1963, for example, she sent a registered letter to President John F. Kennedy predicting that a trip to Dallas would guarantee his re-election to a second term.

In fact, JFK was assassinated during a trip to Dallas 11 months later and never got the chance to return to Washington, much less run for re-election.

Around the same time, the psychic predicted that the Beatles and Rolling Stones were "a flash in the pan" and advised record company executives to court "the real stars of the British invasion, a group with staying power, The Dave Clark Five."

Incredibly there's more. Over the years, in letters, telephone calls, personal consultations and public statements, Miss Cruzec:

● Advised Marilyn Monroe to use sleeping pills and tranquilizers to calm herself down and take control of her life. A few months later, Miss Monroe overdosed on drugs — and died!

● Told President Richard Nixon that both the stars and history favored his presidency, making him "invulnerable to criticism or any other problems that might diminish his standing as America's most trusted president."

PREDICTION: The Beatles are a flash in the pan!

PREDICTION: A trip to Dallas will guarantee J.F.K.'s re-election!

She also said that Watergate would blow over if the President "stonewalled" the press, a strategy that turned the tide of public opinion against him!

● Assured at least two Ford Motor Co. executives that the Edsel would become the hottest selling automobile of all time. In fact, the Edsel bombed — costing Ford extreme embarrassment and costing millions in development costs!

● Insisted that a tough touring and recording schedule would keep Elvis Presley "young in body and spirit" — and save him from an early grave. As everyone knows, The King's grueling schedule drove him to the drug abuse and addiction that killed him!

PREDICTION: Advised Marilyn Monroe to USE sleeping pills!

"People trust me and I never betray that trust, at least not intentionally," Miss Cruzec told reporters during one of only two interviews she has ever agreed to.

"I'm the first to admit that you can take a few predictions out of context and build a case for my incompetence," she added.

"But over the long haul, prediction in and prediction out, I must be doing something right.

"If I weren't, my clients wouldn't keep coming back."

At least one client, a major Hollywood actress who has starred in dozens of blockbuster films since 1964, says she spends as much as $500 per week for Miss Cruzec's counsel.

"She isn't often right, or even close," said the star, who spoke on the condition that her name be kept secret.

"But she's such a warm and loving person, I keep going back.

"I don't know . . . there's a charisma about her that makes everything she says feel so right, even if it isn't."

PREDICTION: Tough touring will save Elvis from an early grave!

From broken bones to nosebleeds...

FIRST AID DO'S AND DON'TS FOR MANY COMMON INJURIES

Knowing the right way to treat common injuries can save you and your loved ones a lot of grief — and here are some important first aid tips from an expert:

● Never push a broken bone back into place — you can damage blood vessels, nerves or muscles. Instead, keep movement to a minimum. If you can't get a doctor immediately, immobilize the bone with splints made from two pieces of clean wood, plastic or heavy cardboard tied together.

● To free skin frozen to cold metal, pour cool or lukewarm water at the point where the skin touches the metal.

● Don't apply a tourniquet to a bleeding arm or leg wound unless you're thoroughly skilled in the proper technique. "Most people tie a tourniquet too tight and keep it tightened too long — and that can cost a person an entire limb," warns Dr. Earl Schwartz, an expert in emergency medicine.

Instead, keep a constant, firm pressure on the wound with a clean cloth or your bare hands.

● If a cat scratches you, see a doctor for a prescription antibiotic. Over-the-counter antibiotics aren't powerful enough, and you could develop a staph or strep infection, tetanus or cat scratch fever.

● Don't try to stop a nosebleed by tilting your head back — that will only cause blood to flow down your throat. Simply pinch your nostrils together for 10 minutes, allowing time for a clot to form.

● Never put warm oil in an ear to stop an earache — that will only worsen the problem. Get an antibiotic prescription from your doctor.

Man sets world record for snake throwing!

BUNOR, India — A man set a controversial world record when he threw a snake 233 feet, 4 inches during an annual competition.

Kanjari Behera out-distanced his nearest competitor by nearly 21 feet. The event was marred by protests from more than 300 animal-rights advocates.

Moms blamed for heart disease!

Scientists for the Medical Research Council have found an unlikely key to heart disease — it's mother's fault!

The risk of heart attack, researchers now believe, lies not only in what we eat, but in the quality of the nutrition we received from our mothers during pregnancy and early childhood.

And our mother's own diet and general state of health during her childhood and child-bearing years may also play a vital role in our vulnerability to heart disease.

WEEKLY WORLD NEWS WEDDING

NEW JERSEY LOVEBIRDS GETTING MARRIED — THANKS TO ELVIS AND BAT BOY

WEST ORANGE, N.J. — Lovebirds Michael Calabria and Maria Sapaia are engaged and looking forward to a long, happy marriage — and they owe it all to Weekly World News T-shirts!

By TANYA BRODER
Weekly World News

"I'd gone down to the beach wearing my Bat Boy shirt," said happy Michael. "When I saw this really good-looking girl wearing a Weekly World News shirt with Elvis on it, I decided to go up and talk to her. It was Maria."

One thing led to another and the attractive couple quickly started dating seriously.

"We got along real well from the very beginning," Maria said.

"We had a lot in common but if we hadn't both had our T-shirts on when we did, we probably never would have met."

When Michael decided to ask Maria to marry him, he wanted to continue the Weekly World News tradition.

"I ask her to pose with me with us both wearing Bat Boy shirts," crafty Michael said. "I told her I was going to send the pictures in to the paper as part of a contest.

"But it was all a setup and halfway through the photo session I acted like I had stepped on something," he said. "When I reached down to see what it was, it turned out to be her engagement ring."

Surprised Maria joyfully accepted Michael's proposal.

"It was cute and romantic that he proposed to me in Weekly World News T-shirts," she said. "Those crazy shirts have a special meaning for us — they helped us find true love."

The couple is planning a June wedding.

KILLER STRIKE

SUPERBUG INNOCENT

SUSAN JIMISON / Weekly World News

A new killer flu is poised to sweep America — and experts expect it to claim millions of victims from all walks of life!

The enormous fatality rate will come because of increases in world travel, a larger — and poorer — world population, and the fact that most people no longer possess antibodies to deadly flus like the one that killed 50 million people around the world in 1918, scientists say.

"It's a major threat," says Dominick Iacuzio of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. "It would wreak tremendous damage on the U.S. and around the world."

Such a giant flu — called a pandemic — has historically come only periodically, attacking humankind in killer waves. The last major flu pandemic was the Hong Kong flu of 1968, which killed 70,000 people in the U.S. alone. The next one, scientists fear, could be far, far worse.

"A new subtype of virus has the potential to run through the population," worries Iacuzio. "It would cause severe disease and widespread infection because no one would have antibodies to it."

TENT CITIES were built when hospitals couldn't handle the millions who were stricken during the 1918 pandemic.

Health authorities are especially worried because pandemics like the flu of 1918 can wipe out not only the very young and the very old, but also healthy people in the prime of life. They're so virulent that many victims die within hours of infection.

Witnesses to the deadly 1918 infection recall a healthy young man who got on a streetcar in Chicago and died before the trolley had gone six blocks. Others tell of a woman who boarded a subway in New York in seemingly perfect health — and keeled over dead within a half hour.

Although attempts have been made to monitor newly emerging flu viruses and prepare susceptible populations with flu shots, experts say it's inevitable that an unexpected and hitherto unknown virus will eventually develop and spread. When it does, doctors will be helpless.

"Despite all the incredible breakthroughs, I don't think we could do a damn thing about it if the 1918 virus came back," says virologist Edwin Kilbourne of New York Medical College, author of a bestselling book on flu viruses called Influenza. "We could never vaccinate the world population all

Topsy-Turvy Tribe

...they spend their entire waking lives upside down with their feet straight up in the air!

By JOE BERGER
Weekly World News

AUTAZES, Brazil — Excited scientists have discovered a tiny tribe of Amazon savages who hunt, fish, dance and defend themselves against their enemies — all while standing on their hands!

"The Ugarus spend their entire waking lives upside down with their feet stuck straight up in the air — like no other people on Earth," said astonished anthropologist Dr. Raul Picarra.

"And the way they've adapted to this bizarre lifestyle is truly amazing. These people get around as well on their hands as we do on our feet — and they perform chores with their feet as deftly as we perform them with our hands.

"The women cook and care for their children with their feet, and the men gather food and run fishing lines and throw spears to ward off predators — all with their feet.

"It's truly a sight to behold."

The Portuguese scientist said he and six colleagues discovered the topsy-turvy tribe of 420 scantily clad savages while exploring uncharted territory northwest of here last month.

"When we first stumbled upon the Ugaru village, we assumed all that handwalking was part of some kind of ritual," Dr. Picarra said.

"Then the natives spotted us and came after us with their spears planted firmly between their toes — and we realized this was no ritual, this was truly the way they lived.

SCIENTIST Dr. Raul Picarra.

"They were not hostile or afraid — just very quizzical about these strange creatures they'd found lurking around.

"And the little kids couldn't stop giggling at us. They thought we were pretty silly, walking on our feet like that."

The scientists spent six days with the fascinating natives, communicating with their newfound friends in the language of the region's Guarani Indians. And when their visitors hit the trail, the curious Ugarus made them promise to return soon.

"I think they got a kick out of these crazy strangers who picked fruit with their hands — and walked around with their heads stuck straight up in the air all day," Dr. Picarra said.

Romance may come in an unexpected way. The single Taurus could find love on a trip to the library or at a music concert.

The numbers 3, 19 and 27 are lucky for you this week.

A nagging health problem could be solved by something as simple as a minor change in your life-style. A spat with a loved one gets patched up by Wednesday.

CANCER
June 21 – July 22

On Tuesday, disharmony between you and a loved one could tempt you to take a rash action. But keep a cool head. Your even temper will pay big dividends toward the end of the week.

A close friend may come to you for help with a personal matter. Be generous and supportive but be sure you don't neglect your responsibilities to your own family or your job.

Late in the week you may see some changes in your home life. They'll be inconvenient at first but you'll end up happy.

Lucky colors are green and yellow.

SAGITTARIUS
Nov. 22 – Dec. 21

This is a good week to make decisions about career investments and to investigate possibilities to buy real estate.

You could get good news in the mail sometime in mid-week.

Also, an unexpected monetary reward of some kind is indicated for lucky Sagittarians.

Eight, 17 and 24 are wonderfully lucky numbers for you this week.

CAPRICORN
Dec. 22 – Jan. 19

You may find yourself called upon to cheer up a depressed friend or relative. It will be one crisis after another this week but you can handle it all if you practice the virtue of patience.

If you're single, delay making decisions or changes. Married Capricorns should just wait for the cosmic storm to pass. By the weekend, creative powers are highlighted. Let your imagination run wild.

AQUARIUS
Jan. 20 – Feb. 18

A great career opportunity could present itself to you this week.

Make a special effort to be sensitive to a mate's desires and goals and make shared decisions after discussing options.

Social life picks up in a delightful way by the weekend.

A surprise birthday party for a friend or a spur-of-the-moment outing is a possibility.

PISCES
Feb. 19 – Mar. 20

Pisceans will have to watch a tendency to overdo it in the work area this week. Treat yourself to a good movie or even a nice long relaxing bath on Wednesday to calm yourself down. You'll come back stronger and even more productive.

Something you read in a magazine or newspaper could trigger a money-making idea if you stay open to it.

Lucky numbers are 1, 15 and 24.

If your birthday is this week...

Mon., February 12 – Sun., February 18

Conflicts and friction could haunt you over the next few weeks. But if you ride out the storm you'll find a wonderful new sense of happiness toward the end of March. A health problem suddenly threatens your well-being toward the beginning of summer but you can clear it up by going on a sensible diet, eliminating alcohol and getting regular exercise.

Girl, 6, stabs 7-year-old with steak knife — in fight over Barbie doll!

A LITTLE girl stabbed her friend — over a Barbie doll.

By JACK ALEXANDER / Weekly World News

MODESTO, Calif. — A name-calling, hair-pulling brawl between two little girls ended when a 6-year-old stabbed a 7-year-old with a steak knife — in a fuss over a Barbie doll.

"The older girl apparently had the younger one's Barbie doll and wouldn't give it back to her," said Police Sgt. Steve Ferry. "One word led to another and they duked it out."

After brawling on the sidewalk in front of the apartment complex where both girls lived, the younger one ran inside and got the knife from a kitchen drawer.

"She came back out and stabbed her playmate in the back," Sgt. Ferry said.

"The victim was rushed to the hospital with a 2½-inch wound.

"She was in serious condition for several hours, but fortunately the knife didn't hit any vital organs. I understand she is much better now and may even have been released."

Police said the younger girl's mother was doing the wash in another room and didn't see her daughter grab the steak knife.

The victim was in the care of a babysitter while her mom worked. The younger girl was released to her parents and likely will undergo counseling, Sgt. Ferry said. Little else can be done because of her age, he added.

Bikinis banned on Florida beaches!

TAMPA, Fla. — Efforts to make the shores here more family-friendly are proceeding full speed ahead. Having successfully pushed through legislation outlawing skimpy thong bikinis from county beaches, a coalition of family values groups has launched a campaign to have two-piece swimsuits banned altogether. Bathing attire baring more than four inches of midriff will be forbidden, according to new rules proposed by the activists.

WOMAN SURVIVES 11-STORY FALL — BECAUSE SHE IS FAT AS A PIG!

SYDNEY, Australia — A 275-pound woman survived an 11-story fall — thanks to her extra land!

Marjorie Daley, 45, survived with only minor injuries because of "a large amount of fatty tissue, which acted as a cushion," a hospital spokesman confirmed.

The mother of two fell more than 100 feet while trying to retrieve the family cat from her apartment's window ledge. The pet, which also fell, was crushed to death in the mishap.

FIVE PEOPLE DIE IN FOOD FIGHT

TURKEY drumsticks turned into deadly missiles at a recent dinner for world peace.

By JOE BERGER / Weekly World News

. . . at $5,000-a-plate dinner for world peace

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — A fancy, $5,000-a-plate dinner to promote world peace became a war zone when 200 well-dressed diners squared off in a steak-slinging, drumstick-swinging, caviar-flinging food fight — killing five people and injuring 23!

The bloody battle royal erupted at a fund-raising dinner sponsored by the European Institute for Peaceful Co-Existence — an elegant affair attended by government and religious leaders, millionaire businessmen and jet-setting society matrons from eight countries.

"This started out as a very posh event for a very noble cause, but something went terribly wrong — and by the time we got there, there were bodies everywhere," said shocked cop Karl Enarsson.

"But the weird thing is that all this death and all these horrible injuries were caused by plain old food — people getting whacked with turkey legs or banged over the head with champagne bottles or having imported caviar shoved down their throats. It was a simple food fight that turned very nasty."

The murderous meat-and-potatoes melee broke out when a British businessman seated at the head table became enraged at a French defense minister seated next to him and banged his fist on the table, showering fellow diners with food and drink.

"People started picking the food off their clothes and tossing it back at the guy — and suddenly, the place was in total bedlam," recalled Portuguese priest Father Gustavo Ferraz. "Everyone was hurling food at each other, shoving food in each other's faces, even hitting each other with dishes and bottles.

"People were dashing into the kitchen to 'reload' — grabbing frozen steaks and turkey drumsticks and meatballs, anything they could find to throw at somebody. These were all dignified, peace-loving people, but that night, the Devil took control of them."

Before the chow row was over, four men had been battered to death and one ill-fated lady had died when another miffed matron shoved a handful of $100-an-ounce caviar down her windpipe.

"This food fight was actually deadlier than the gunfight at the Man goes blind — because he drank too much apple cider!

HARTCLIFFE, England — An apple a day may keep the doctor away but too much apple cider can make you blind! Cider loving Mike Goodhind has downed 20 pints a day since he was about 12.

It seems he's ingested so much arsenic from apple seeds left in the cider that the poison has affected his vision.

Now he sees double and doctors say his optic nerves are beyond repair.

"It's frightening," said the 32-year-old father of two. "I can't see my wife or kids anymore. Everything is a blur."

Practical joker serves co-workers cat food at farewell party!

Firefighter Roger Bosence threw his own farewell party and repaid co-workers for years of practical jokes — by serving them cat food hors d'oeuvres.

And those tasty treats that weren't made of cat food were laced with laxatives.

The fun-loving firefighter sat back and watched his pals dig into his yummy-looking buffet at the station in Dorsett, England — then took off for his new job in faraway Bournemouth before they could get even.

Now guys can shave & brush their teeth — at the same time!

It's the perfect gift for the man in a hurry — a battery-powered device that will allow him to shave and brush his teeth at the same time!

Here's how it works: The toothbrush comes out at the top of the razor's handle and its bristles move back and forth automatically as the man strokes the razor across his face.

When the guy is shaving his neck the toothbrush neatly retracts into the razor's handle.

AMERICA'S HEARTLAND!

CANCER DOC BURNS TWO OF HER KIDS ALIVE, SAY COPS

By SUSAN JIMISON / Weekly World News

PRAIRIE VILLAGE, Kan. — In a hideous crime that rivals the monstrous deeds of Susan Smith, murderous mom Dr. Debora Green torched her own home — and deliberately burned two of her three children alive, authorities say!

What's more, police say, the 44-year-old cancer specialist was poisoning her husband with doses of a highly toxic substance, nearly killing him with a brain abscess, heart trouble and a number of other serious health problems.

The deadly doctor is in jail awaiting trial on two counts of homicide in the fiery deaths of the children, Kelly, 6, and Tim, 13. She's also charged with the attempted murder of another daughter, Kate, 10 — who miraculously escaped the family's flaming home — and of her husband, cardiologist Dr. Michael Farrar, 40.

"When the fire department arrived at the fire on October 24, 1995, Dr. Green was standing outside the house," said Police Chief Charles Grover, whose department investigated the tragic blaze.

"Her 10-year-old had escaped out of a second-story window, and Dr. Green told firemen she believed the other two kids were inside.

"We hoped it was a fire of natural causes and everything would be fine. It didn't turn out that way."

According to Chief Grover, Dr. Green's 16-year marriage to Dr. Farrar had shown signs of severe trouble during the year before the fatal fire.

There had been an earlier blaze at the family's home which insurance adjustors had concluded was accidental, Chief Grover said.

It is now being re-investigated.

There were rumors that Dr. Farrar — who filed for divorce the day before the deadly second fire — had been having an affair. Dr. Green was once hauled off to a psychiatric unit by police after she became abusive during a domestic dispute.

"After the October fire we investigated for several weeks," Chief Grover recalled.

"We were suspicious of arson. The fire had moved unnaturally, very fast. It seemed to start low in the house at multiple set points on the floor. The arson task force concluded it was deliberately set."

In the course of their investigations, police learned that Dr. Green was in possession of castor beans, the source of a deadly toxin called ricin. They eventually linked the poisonous beans with Dr. Farrar's deteriorating health, blaming the man's heart problems, intestinal ailments and life-threatening brain abscess on doses of ricin administered by his wife. They have not given a motive for the crime.

"Dr. Green was arrested the day before Thanksgiving and charged with two counts of homicide and two counts of attempted homicide," Chief Grover said.

"She's being held in jail on $3 million bond.

"She has not entered a plea yet."

The police chief said Dr. Farrar was hospitalized for brain surgery to remove his abscess and is now recovering.

Little Kate — the couple's only surviving child — is living with her paternal grandparents.
